To report what other people have said, you can use say or a specific verb, e.g., 'I'll drive you to the airport.'

*Jack said he would drive me to the airport.
Jack offered to drive me to the airport.*

- After specific reporting verbs, there are one to three different grammatical patterns (see chart on the right).
- In negative sentences, use the negative infinitive (not to do) or the negative gerund (not doing), e.g., He reminded me not to be late. She regretted not going to the party.

Verbs that use a that clause
With agree, admit, deny, promise, regret, you can also use that + clause.
Leo admitted stealing the watch.
Leo admitted that he had stolen the watch.

Rewrite the sentences using a reporting verb from page 81 (3a). Use the verbs in the simple past.

- 1 - John: "I'll make some coffee."

John _____.

- 2 - John to Mary: "Remember to lock the door."

John _____.

- 3 - John: "Yes, it was me. I stole the money."

The policeman _____.

1. John offered to make some coffee.
2. John reminded Mary to lock the door.
3. John admitted stealing the money. / John admitted that he had stolen the money.
4. The policeman accused John of stealing the laptop.

CLAUSES OF CONTRAST AND PURPOSE

9A

clauses of contrast and purpose

clauses of contrast

- 1 Although the ad said it would last for years, mine broke after two months. (5) 4))
I went to work even though I wasn't feeling very well.
I like Ann, though she sometimes annoys me.
- 2 In spite of (Despite) her age, she is still very active.
being 85, she is still very active.
the fact that she's 85, she is still very active.

Use although, though, even though, and in spite of or despite to express a contrast.

- 1 Use although, though, even though + a clause.

Although and even though can be used at the beginning or in the middle of a sentence.

- Even though* is stronger than although and is used to express a big or surprising contrast.
- Though* is more informal than although. It can only be used in the middle of a sentence.

- 2 After in spite of or despite, use a noun, a verb in the -ing form, or the fact that + subject + verb.

- Remember not to use of after despite NOT Despite of the rain...

clauses of purpose

- to in order to so as to (5) 5))
- 1 I went to the bank to talk to the bank manager.
  - 2 I went to the bank for a meeting with the bank manager.
  - 3 I went to the bank so that I could talk to the manager in person.
  - 4 I wrote down what he said so as not to forget it.

Use to, in order to, so as to, for, and so that to express purpose.

- 1 After to, in order to, and so as to, use a base form.
- 2 Use for + a noun, e.g., for a meeting. You can also use for + gerund to describe the exact purpose of a thing, e.g., This liquid is for cleaning metal.
- 3 After so that, use a subject + modal verb (can, could, would, etc.).
- 4 To express a negative purpose, use so as not to or in order not to, e.g., I wrote down what he said in order not to forget it. NOT to not forget it.

CONTRASTE

Although, though e even though podem ser utilizados no início ou no meio de uma frase.

Estrutura: Although / Even though / Though + oração (SUJ + VERBO)
